

Upload image

Login
Register

Search Camps

City

State

Radius

Camp Name [optional]

User Name [optional]

Search

Sort By

- Name
- Distance

RESULTS

RATING

(10 votes)

Rockport State Park - View Map

Adventures: 10
Most Recent Adventure: SpringTripper

The family friendly trails of 670-acre Rockport State Park explore an ancient forest where dappled sunlight illuminates mossy trees and lush ferns -- perfect for a springtime stroll.

CREATE ADVENTURE

RATING

(20 votes)

Rockport State Park

Trips: 10
Most Recent Trip: SpringTripper

The family friendly trails of 670-acre Rockport State Park explore an ancient forest where dappled sunlight illuminates mossy trees and lush ferns -- perfect for a springtime stroll.

RATING

(20 votes)

Rockport State Park

Trips: 10
Most Recent Trip: SpringTripper

The family friendly trails of 670-acre Rockport State Park explore an ancient forest where dappled sunlight illuminates mossy trees and lush ferns -- perfect for a springtime stroll.

RATING

(20 votes)

Rockport State Park

Trips: 10
Most Recent Trip: SpringTripper

The family friendly trails of 670-acre Rockport State Park explore an ancient forest where dappled sunlight illuminates mossy trees and lush ferns -- perfect for a springtime stroll.

RATING

(20 votes)

Rockport State Park

Trips: 10
Most Recent Trip: SpringTripper

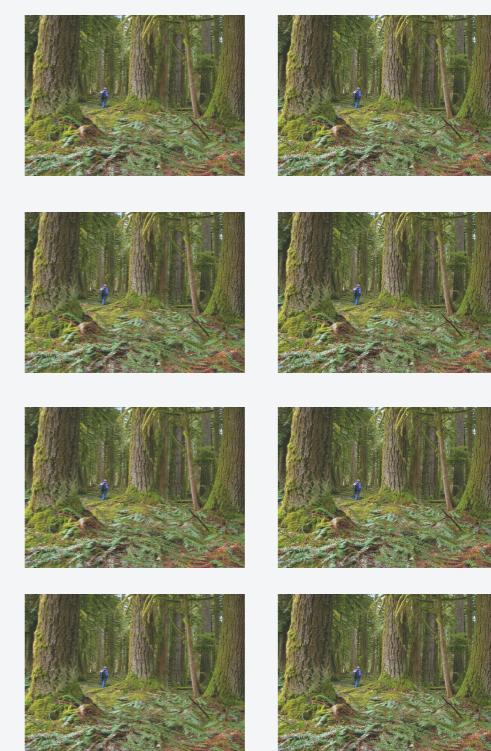

The family friendly trails of 670-acre Rockport State Park explore an ancient forest where dappled sunlight illuminates mossy trees and lush ferns -- perfect for a springtime stroll.

More

Rockport State Park + 6 —

Details

Name: Rockport State Park
Address: 51905 Washington 20
Rockport, WA 98283
Contact Info: (360) 853-8461
Latitude: 40.905210
Longitude: 40.905210
Map: View Map

Description

The family friendly trails of 670-acre Rockport State Park explore an ancient forest where dappled sunlight illuminates mossy trees and lush ferns -- perfect for a springtime stroll.

From the parking area, the 3-mile Evergreen Trail starts just beyond the restrooms and maintains a mostly easy grade with the only significant climbing along the top of the loop. The well-signed path will keep you going in the right direction when you encounter creeks and service roads. As you hike, notice the rich forest floor, where hidden organisms are recycling downed organic material into nutrients for new plants and food for local wildlife. Then cast your view skyward to the many towering red cedar and Douglas-fir trees, some reaching heights of more than 250 feet.

Along the trail you will cross several quaint wooden bridges where numerous creeks flow down through the park from the top of 5,537-foot Sauk Mountain, which stays snow-covered into late July. Take advantage of one of the many benches to rest and contemplate the variety of dense flora surrounding you. You just may feel as if you've been transported to a primeval forest due to the limited sunlight streaming down through the forest canopy above. For more, add on the 0.5 mile Fern Creek Trail, a mini-loop in the center of the park where some of the area's largest trees can be seen.

Adventure Reports

User: MidDayTripper

Date: 10/02/2015

Decided to take a short day hike on the way back from a Methow camping trip. Pass by Blue Lake trail was 48 degrees and raining so settled for this little walk in the woods instead. Nicer than you would think as the attached camp ground is closed, perhaps forever. Met only one other party on the whole trail, despite the fact it is directly off the 20. Old growth, ferns and greenery everywhere. A nice way to spend an hour or so...

User: MidDayTripper

Date: 10/02/2015

Decided to take a short day hike on the way back from a Methow camping trip. Pass by Blue Lake trail was 48 degrees and raining so settled for this little walk in the woods instead. Nicer than you would think as the attached camp ground is closed, perhaps forever. Met only one other party on the whole trail, despite the fact it is directly off the 20. Old growth, ferns and greenery everywhere. A nice way to spend an hour or so...

User: MidDayTripper

Date: 10/02/2015

Decided to take a short day hike on the way back from a Methow camping trip. Pass by Blue Lake trail was 48 degrees and raining so settled for this little walk in the woods instead. Nicer than you would think as the attached camp ground is closed, perhaps forever. Met only one other party on the whole trail, despite the fact it is directly off the 20. Old growth, ferns and greenery everywhere. A nice way to spend an hour or so...

User: MidDayTripper

Date: 10/02/2015

Decided to take a short day hike on the way back from a Methow camping trip. Pass by Blue Lake trail was 48 degrees and raining so settled for this little walk in the woods instead. Nicer than you would think as the attached camp ground is closed, perhaps forever. Met only one other party on the whole trail, despite the fact it is directly off the 20. Old growth, ferns and greenery everywhere. A nice way to spend an hour or so...

More

Rockport State Park - REVIEW

Date From: 10/02/2015 Date To: 10/09/2015

Please upload HI Quality images only - [MAX: 10MB]

Describe your adventure:

Would you recommend this adventure?

Yes No

Submit

Cancel

ChadLatham's Adventures

Location: Rockport State Park

User: MidDayTripper

Date: 10/02/2015 - 10/09/2015

Decided to take a short day hike on the way back from a Methow camping trip. Pass by Blue Lake trail was 48 degrees and raining so settled for this little walk in the woods instead. Nicer than you would think as the attached camp ground is closed, perhaps forever. Met only one other party on the whole trail, despite the fact it is directly off the 20. Old growth, ferns and greenery everywhere. A nice way to spend an hour or so...

Location: Rockport State Park

User: MidDayTripper

Date: 10/02/2015 - 10/09/2015

Decided to take a short day hike on the way back from a Methow camping trip. Pass by Blue Lake trail was 48 degrees and raining so settled for this little walk in the woods instead. Nicer than you would think as the attached camp ground is closed, perhaps forever. Met only one other party on the whole trail, despite the fact it is directly off the 20. Old growth, ferns and greenery everywhere. A nice way to spend an hour or so...

Location: Rockport State Park

User: MidDayTripper

Date: 10/02/2015 - 10/09/2015

Decided to take a short day hike on the way back from a Methow camping trip. Pass by Blue Lake trail was 48 degrees and raining so settled for this little walk in the woods instead. Nicer than you would think as the attached camp ground is closed, perhaps forever. Met only one other party on the whole trail, despite the fact it is directly off the 20. Old growth, ferns and greenery everywhere. A nice way to spend an hour or so...

Location: Rockport State Park

User: MidDayTripper

Date: 10/02/2015 - 10/09/2015

Decided to take a short day hike on the way back from a Methow camping trip. Pass by Blue Lake trail was 48 degrees and raining so settled for this little walk in the woods instead. Nicer than you would think as the attached camp ground is closed, perhaps forever. Met only one other party on the whole trail, despite the fact it is directly off the 20. Old growth, ferns and greenery everywhere. A nice way to spend an hour or so...

More